

Formal Consecration to Truth (Atheist Version)

I commit to start with the simple truths of physical nature, i.e. with the things we know through our senses, to grow in truth my entire life.

I hereby consecrate myself entirely to seeking and finding the truth. I commit myself to it and all the work and problems that I will confront because of it, knowing that truth alone can bring joy.

I commit to grow in my knowledge and love of the fundamental truths of physical nature, upon which all others truths depend.

I commit to asking for help from all who are able and willing to give it (seen and unseen) in growing in truth. I will strive to always be grateful for every truth that I learn, as well as for those through whom I learn it, remembering that, each time I learn something I grow in my goal in life, truth.

I also will seek those who will help me to take a real interest in the world around me, always joyfully looking to learn more about the world. I will also seek help in developing a habit of rationality and intellectual vigilance in my daily life, always remembering to meditate on whatsoever things are true. I commit to being open to learning all in a rigorous fashion and not being closed to the source of all truth, but open and increasingly so. I commit to study that I may find the God who others who know more than me proclaim.

This consecration not be reprinted without written permission from the author.

The Institute for Advanced Physics

IAPweb.org

P.O. Box 15030, Baton Rouge, LA 70895

Copyright November 2019 by Anthony Rizzi, all rights reserved.